

I WRITE MY ENGAGING AUDIO SCRIPT

Hello dear listeners,

I am your brother, son or grandson, BONE Bontchére.

Today we are going to talk about a crucial topic for our agriculture: the importance of the exchange of information between producers. Knowing how to improve our techniques culture can really make the difference in getting better yields. Have you already asked if it would be possible to create a platform that connects producers, advisors and agricultural experts?

Being well informed means having the opportunity to adapt our agricultural techniques to our region and thus achieve better results. But today, access to information is still limited, especially in our rural areas, notably in the Tchitchao community.

The proof is that despite the efforts of ICCAT through the presence of advisors agricultural products as well as the E-agri Conseil platform, several producers struggle to access to information for reasons such as the high cost of internet connection, lack of communication credit among others

Faced with these challenges, let's imagine a simpler and more accessible platform, which brings together producers, advisors and experts in one place. It would be more adapted to our local realities, easy to easy to handle and low cost.

We could organize regular meetings between producers to exchange ideas, or even form groups that would try these new practices together. Then we We will provide feedback in audio or video format which will remain available on the platform. This platform would be accessible without an internet connection and we could speak our local languages. Each of us has a role to play in this process of innovation.

This platform would not be limited to the exchange of technical information. It could also alert us to critical periods for certain crops or inform us of new practices that protect our soil while increasing our production. We will be able to even learn how to make fertilizers naturally, chase away insects pests or termites in our fields.

As an old proverb from our country says: Alone we go faster, together we go further. By sharing our knowledge, we ensure everyone's success. So I invite us to a once this platform is set up to share information because I firmly believe that each of us has the ability to bring about positive change in our community. By adopting these new practices and sharing our knowledge, we can create a better future for us, our children, and our lands.

Thank you for your kind attention, take good care of yourself.
